NEWS BY TELEGRAPH

IMPORTANT FROM RICHMOND—THE NEW CABINET.

RICHMOND, March 18.—The Cabinet has at last been formed, and the Senate, this morning, confirmed the appointments. They are as follows:

G. W. RANDOLPH, of Va., Secretary of War.
THOS. H. WATTS, of Ala., Attorney General.
J. P. BENJAMIN, of La., Secretary of State.
C. G. MEMMINGER, of S. C., Secretary of the Treasury.
S. R. MALLORY, of Fla., Secretary of the Navy.
JOHN H. REAGAN, of Texas, Postmaster-General.

FROM EAST TENNESSEE.

KNOXVILLE, Va., March 18.—A gentleman who arrived this morning from East Tennessee reports the utmost confusion there has existed. Cumberland Mountain, at Wheeler's Gap, and also at Jacksborough, Campbell county, East Tennessee, about 60 miles from Knoxville. The destruction of the treasury, however, renders it difficult for the banking army to make any further advance, and it is felt improbable that the entire force of the enemy can be cut off and captured. The report that two of our cavalry companies had met with a loss, is untrue.

Another report, received by telegraph, via Memphis, says that the enemy crossed the Mountain in force and entered at Big Creek Gap, and General Leadbetter, with a strong Confederate force, had gone to meet the invaders.

EVACUATION OF NEW MADRID.

MEMPHIS, March 15.—Authentic information has been received here of the evacuation of the town of New Madrid by the Confederate troops, and by the Confederate troops. An artillery fight raged throughout the day on Thursday, in which the Confederates got the best.

Thursday's reliable information was received of the arrival of General Smith with forty thousand Federal reinforcements; whereupon it was immediately determined to evacuate the place. A part of our forces proceeded up the river to Island No. 10, and a portion down the river to Tiptonville.

Gen. Pillow was elected through the Federal lines Thursday night, and brought this information, which is reliable. The small arms carried off and the ammunition of the Confederate were saved; the artillery was lost. The Confederate headquarters are at Island No. 10. Our gunboats are at Tiptonville. The enemy are below Point Pleasant, stationed on the bluffs of the river.

FROM MARYLAND.

NORFOLK, March 18.—Seven of the enemy's sailing ships and four steamers are in sight below Fortress Monroe. They do not venture towards Newport News. A French war steamer is above the Fortress.

THE LATEST FROM EUROPE.

The European correspondence of the New York Herald has a brief telegram from Madrid, of the date of February 25, to the effect that—

Admiral Prim was arrested at Tangier, at the instance of the American Consul at Gibraltar on account of the detention of Mr. Perry, who came to Tangier for that purpose." The news may be received with distrust.

The proceedings in the British Parliament, before adjourning for the Christmas holidays, were more in detail. We copy an account of the speeches in the House of Commons, on the 20th February:

Lord Palmerston stated that, during the debate on the 17th inst., in the House of Lords, Earl Robert Peel had read, apparently officially, a telegram from Lisbon, which he (Palmerston) supposed to be genuine, to the effect that Mr. Mason, on the occasion of the expression at the time, but in the Parliament was given to understand as the result not of the House might escape. As had passed through a breach of neutrality, and he had written to Sir Robert Peel, explaining his apparent discourtesy in not replying to his question, and calling himself to order.

In the course of Saturday, the 22d, communications took place which led to a request that Sir Robert Peel would call upon Lord Palmerston, which he accordingly did. Lord Palmerston explained to Sir Robert Peel that the vessel was under the charge of arranging a passage for Mason. He was acknowledged to him by Major Gavin, the friend of the Orleans family, mentioned in the statement made in the House of the privilege of the House could not be questioned, and that it was impossible for him to refer him to the House of Commons. Sir Robert Peel replied that he quite understood the position of the Government, and that he could expect a proclamation of a most neutral character. Henry Wheaton had been charged with the Napoleon papers. The proclamation was not issued in consequence of the information that had been received, but in order that there might be no doubt as to certain acts of participation as to be hostile to the interests of the French Government, and that the British Government would not allow such acts to be committed in British ports, and that the British Government would not allow such acts to be committed in British ports, and that the British Government would not allow such acts to be committed in British ports

Amidst such a state of affairs, the gratifying intelligence has been his share in providing defences for the security of our seaboard, yet with the honors and military rank that have been conferred upon others for less deserving, he has, thus far, been passed unnoticed. As sweet and fresh! Until long ages make
Of the Old Dominion
Such—Death to Nature monument sweep
Of her with every fall.
And if my presence on my harbor
Be a welcome guest here,
Then, my friends, I have a right to stay
For a thousand years.

Dear Lands! I have also thee here
That many comes soon,
As the pleasure that Angelus
Of the Old Dominion
At the earliest moment in the here.

A silver sea of grass,
Without a single tree, whether
Of this gentle land,
Into the sky, and
Are the blossoms of the
The earliest into touch till sky pool,
The gentle and calm
And the Dominion blue eyes
Of the Old Dominion
Face—they were glorious Edenlike
Each in a line of purple!

Dear Lands! I see thee in
Gentle like in trees,
Thy waters bright and bold
My sister, blushing God
My rebel thoughts with priest-aimed
Drooping eyes bow,
Closing thy need and flaxen shape
Of the Old Dominion!

Long the trees thou, fields Gentle,
Long thy waters flow,
And in sunlight or my land
That want the old hope,
Yet, my heart, my heart, my heart,
What could please me
And when the silver planets rose
In the old time,

Such Cavaliers I did feel
Such Cavaliers I did feel
Such as my heart and soul

Yet would my heart and soul

Yet would I not, as other boys

Until my brothers and friends

And many a leaf

Of the year to me
I found them cool, I found the sun,
Beneath the silver tree,
And yet I found not sympathy,

THE CONFEDERATE CONGRESS

SENATE.

RICHMOND, Friday, March 14.

Mr. Phelan, of Mississippi, presented a bill providing for the funding of notes during the year 1862, allowing for each planter only three acres for each able-bodied negro which was more than two bales of five hundred pounds each, to each mill laborer, shall be gathered in the year 1862, and fixed at one thousand dollars fine, not less than twelve months imprisonment, and the forfeiture of the property.

Calhoun presented several petitions, among which the petition was referred to the Committee of Ways and Means, and the Senate went into executive session.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. Gardenier offered a resolution that the Secretary of War be directed to furnish the House with the official reports of General Georges in relation to the battle of Fishing Creek. Passed.

The unfinished business of the House, the bill regulating the compensation of members of Congress, reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, was then taken up. The bill regulates the compensation of members of Congress at $3,000 a year and twenty cents per mile for travel.

Mr. Ritter was aware that some delicacy existed in regard to the disposal of the question. It was not a mere collection of words, but to the first "unconstitutional," as connected with it. Upon those principles we might object to the law which provided a penalty for perjury. It appeared to him that the law was unnecessary. It was absolutely but the right to pass, that power was constitutional, and the question now at issue was "Had this body the right to pass an act restricting the qualification of voters?" The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Pike) whose knee had been [illegible] nearly by his Mr. Pickney's remarks, had said that the Constitution of the United States had based his objection particularly upon the unsound unconstitutionality of the proposition. He would not ask him to question why there was but one place existing in the South at which arms could be manufactured—and for the fact which arms could be manufactured—and for the reason why there was but one place existing in the South at which arms could be manufactured—and for the reason why there was but one place existing in the South at which arms could be manufactured—and for the reason why there was but one place existing in the South at
